The WSIB's Occupational Health Assessment Program: Focus on early assessment and integrated health care

Presenter: Maia Sluzar

Webinar description:

When someone experiences a workplace injury or illness, we're here to help them access the health care they need to recover and return to work. We take an integrated approach to health care that includes community care and regional Specialty programs where people can get evidence-informed treatment for specific types of injuries. Our new Occupational Health Assessment Program (OHAP) provides assessment and case consult services for people with workplace injuries and illnesses. The program will provide assessment and case consult services for people with workplace injuries and illnesses, making it an important part of our integrated approach to health care and creating a clear care path.

Learn more about the assessment program and how it supports better communication and coordination between health care providers, making it easier to get people the right treatment at the right time, closer to home – so they can get care in their community and spend their time on recovery, not travel.
